CAVS principal and the members of the college management board met with the college international students at Clinical studies seminar room. While addressing the students, the principal encouraged them to be the university ambassadors in their countries.

College of agriculture and veterinary science currently has 162 international students from more than 26 nationalities.

Three representatives were elected to champion international student's interests within the university. One PhD student from Rwanda, One MSc student from Ghana and an Undergraduate student from DR.Congo were elected to become the college representative for the international students.

There was a proposal to have an international student's cultural week once a year. This would provide a platform for exchange of ideas and connect students.

The meeting provided a forum where the students thanked the University for making it conducive for their learning. They also highlighted areas they are experiencing challenges, especially in the communication. This the management undertook to address.
